der Thang (Sitzungsberichte d.phil.-hist. Classe d.k. Ak.d.Wis. Vienna, Bd. 89, Jan. 1878).

On Nestorian Christianity, see a summary in K. S. Latourette, A History of Christian Missions in China (New York, 1929). The best account of Christianity under the Tang is A. C. Moule, Christians in China before the year 1550 (London, 1930). Its footnotes contain references to most of the pertinent books. See also A. C. Moule, Xestorians in China (London, 1940). A very full account of the Hsianfu monument is Henri Havret, La Stele Chretienne de Si-ngan-jou (3 parts, Shanghai, 1895, 1897, 1902). The text of the monument presents many difficulties and there is no really satisfactory translation. A popular yet scholarly summary is J. Foster, The Church of the Tang Dynasty (London, 1939). Less critical are P. Y. Saeki, The Nestorian Monument in China (London, 1916), and P. Y. Saeki, The Nestorian Documents and Relics in China (London, 1937). See also F. S. Drake, A>s-torian Monasteries of the Tang Dynasty (Monumenta Serica, Vol. 2, pp. 293-340).

The best account of Manichaeism in China is E. Chavannes and P. Pelliot, Un Traite Manicheen Retrouve en Chine (Paris, 1913). See also P. Pelliot, Les Traditions Manicheennes au Foukien (Toung Pao, 1923, pp. 193-214), and P. Pelliot, Mo-ni et Manicheens (Journal Asiatique, lie Serie, Tome 3, 1914, pp. 461-470). See also H. A. Giles, Confucianism and Its Rivals (New York, 1915, pp. 190-195). An excellent summary in English is T. A. Bisson, Some Chinese Records of Manichaism in China (Chinese Recorder, July, 1929, pp. 413-428). A very scholarly work giving chiefly the translations of Manichaean and anti-Manichsean documents found at Turfan is A. V. Williams Jackson, Researches in Manichmsm (New York, 1932).

On Buddhism under the T'ang, see E. H. Parker, China and Religion (New York, 1905); J. J. M. de Groot, Sectarianism and Religious Persecution in China (2 vols., Amsterdam, 1903); Sir Charles Eliot, Hinduism and Buddhism, An Historical Sketch (3 vols., London, 1921); Samuel Beal, Abstract of Four Lectures on Buddhist Literature in China (London, 1882); Joseph Edkins, Chinese Buddhism (London,

On Islam in China, see M. Broomhall, Islam in China (London, 1909) (faulty in some places), and Isaac Mason, How Islam Entered China (The Moslem World, Vol. 19, pp. 249-263).

On Confucianism under the T'ang, see J. K. Shryock, The Origin and Development of the State Cult of Confucius (New York, 1932).

On education, see E. Biot, Essai sur VHistoire de ^Instruction Publique en Chine (Paris, 1847).
